A squad of Chinese soldiers patrolling the rugged, snow-swept Himalayan Mountains stumbled upon what was believed to be the last female Bigfoot left on Earth — and the senseless goons shot her dead in her tracks!

But what makes the killing even more horrible is evidence that the Bigfoot female was pregnant and probably in the final stages of labor when the soldiers stood only paces away and pumped their rifle shots into her body!

The slaughter raised a public outcry that not even China's hard-line government bosses could ignore. The unidentified squad leader and his trigger-happy soldiers who fired the lethal shots were returned to Beijing and executed within the week.

"The wanton murder of the defenseless and unthreatening Bigfoot creature is a staggering loss of such magnitude that it cannot be measured," a spokesman for a group of scientists said.

"We'd been studying the fragile social structure of the Himalayan Bigfoot for more than a dozen years and not once had there been documented evidence of the existence of a female of the species.

"To learn that a female creature not only existed but was reproducing her own kind was like a miracle from the gods. Then to find out that some kill-crazed idiots had snuffed out that life in such a cold-blooded fashion is beyond all comprehension.

"It is an unprecedented catastrophe for the scientific world."

According to the spokesman, the six-man patrol startled the female Bigfoot and her mate at about the 8,000-foot level of a snow-covered mountain northeast of Mount Everest.

"The female creature was described by each of the soldiers as being about seven feet tall and not noticeably pregnant," the spokesman said.

"Except for her face and breasts, her body was covered with dark, matted hair.

"When the soldiers first spotted her she was squatting on the ground with her mate standing behind her and pressing on her shoulders.

"The postures indicate that the female Bigfoot was about to give birth and that her mate was assisting. After the soldiers fired, the male Bigfoot ran off," the spokesman continued.

"By the time we learned about her death and could get a recovery team there, the creature was gone. No doubt her mate had come back to take her to a proper burial place. Her grave probably will never be found.

"But I am absolutely certain it is the final resting place of the last female Bigfoot to wander the world."

Castration could save your life, says expert

Many studies have warned men about the deadly dangers of smoking, cholesterol and stress, but one researcher believes the surest way to a longer life is through castration!

Endocrinologist Dr. Evelyn Sanders said testosterone is a killer and the reason why men don't live as long as women. In her research, Sanders found that castrated male rats outlived female rats.

Sanders says the reason is that testosterone stimulates the adrenal glands to secrete more adrenaline in men than in women. But after the age of 35, Sanders said the additional adrenaline pumped into the system weakens the male heart.

Historical evidence supports the doctor's theory that testosterone is a killer. In Italy as recently as the 19th century, poor families occasionally sold infant boys to the Catholic Church. These children were castrated so they would keep their soprano singing voices. These singers, known as castrati, lived much longer than the other men of their day.

It's a marriage made in heaven!

ARMLESS MAN WEDS LEGLESS WOMAN

LOVEBIRDS Daniel and Barbara Graham just after their honeymoon. The couple say their marriage made their lives complete.

Armless accountant Daniel Graham has married the gal of his dreams — Barbara, a legless secretary!

The limbless lovebirds say their physical problems are actually a bond between them and that it was their handicaps that brought them together.

"I knew the moment I met Barbara that she was the girl for me," says delighted Dan, 40, of San Pedro, Calif. "She is beautiful, even without legs.

"And we understand each other's problems. We make up for each other's shortcomings. Everything has been wonderful since Barbara came into my life."

Armless Daniel — who lost his limbs to an exploding grenade in Vietnam — first spotted Barbara when she was grocery shopping in her wheelchair in a store near his home. The longtime bachelor says it was love at first sight. "I knew right away I'd found the love of my life."

But for Barbara, 31, love came more slowly. The shy beauty and Daniel dated for more than two years before she agreed to tie the knot.

"I didn't want Daniel to feel sorry for me and I was afraid that was why he was asking me out," recalls brunette Barbara, whose legs were amputated at the knees following an auto accident in 1985. "And I thought he had enough problems coping without arms — I didn't think he needed to be saddled with a wife without legs."

But after many months of courtship, Barbara finally realized that Dan's feelings ran deep and agreed to wed him. On September 26 the armless groom and his legless bride said their vows and flew off for a honeymoon in Hawaii.

Now they're back home again and setting up their love nest, an apartment especially equipped for the handicapped.

"I don't mind that Dan can't put his arms around me, because I can see the love in his eyes," says the happy bride. "And he doesn't mind that I can't walk beside him, because he knows my heart is with him wherever he goes," Barbara said.

"We both feel lucky in spite of our handicaps. In fact, in a way we're grateful that we lost our limbs — because that's what brought us together."

NUKE WARHEAD EXPLODES

SS-18 BALLISTIC MISSILE
BLOWS UP IN SIBERIA
— 3,000 KILLED!

ASIA NEWS SERVICE
MOSCOW — Efforts to disassemble the ex-Soviet nuclear arsenal were halted Monday when the 20-megaton warhead of an SS-18 intercontinental missile accidentally exploded.
Authorities revealed that

... when stupid Russians try to dismantle missile with an ice pick!

By PETER DRAKE
Special to The NEWS

Russian technicians accidentally touched off a massive nuclear blast when they stupidly tried to disarm an intercontinental ballistic missile with a hammer, a hacksaw and an ice pick!

At least 3,000 soldiers, scientists and support personnel were killed when the 20-megaton warhead exploded at 8:23 a.m. on October 5. But experts say millions of innocent people would have been vaporized if the accident had occurred in or near a major city instead of an isolated military post.

"This accident is more than a tragedy, it's an outrage that ought to scare the pants off every man, woman and child on the planet," declared German weapons expert Martin Kappel, one of 25 western investigators who has been allowed to visit the site.

"The Russians clearly didn't know what they were doing and might very well have launched the warhead instead of setting it off. This could have been a disaster of the first magnitude," he continued.

"The Russians don't want to admit it, but my sources have confirmed that the missile was aimed at New York."

News reports have been surprisingly abbreviated in the western press. But accounts of the incident that appeared in Russian newspapers said the drama unfolded when a team of nine poorly trained technicians were ordered to disarm the warhead with nothing more than a claw hammer, a hacksaw and an ice pick.

Nobody knows what happened after the technicians were lowered into the missile silo at the central Siberian site. Experts say the men probably tried to pry the metal casing off the warhead's detonator, setting the 20-megaton bomb off.

"Russian record-keeping isn't the best but it is believed that as many as 3,000 soldiers and support personnel perished in the blast," said Kappel.

"It might sound trite," he added. "But they never knew what hit them."

Fears that radiation released in the blast would endanger cities in Russia and Europe were largely alleviated when prevailing winds pushed the mushroom cloud north of Siberia over the Arctic Circle.

Small amounts of radiation will eventually be deposited over most of the planet. But it is not expected to cause widespread death or sickness, experts said.

The Russian military declined to discuss the disaster with western reporters but did issue a terse statement acknowledging the blast. It went on to say that western officials, including President George Bush, have been briefed and will be kept abreast of developments.

"The Cold War may be over but the danger of nuclear holocaust isn't," said one highly-placed Pentagon source. "If the Russians accidentally launch missiles at the United States all hell will break loose."

"Just because they are no longer our sworn enemies doesn't mean we wouldn't retaliate."

CHILDREN BORN DURING CIVIL WAR FOUND ALIVE!

They haven't aged a day since the 1860s!

By REX WOLFE / Correspondent

A 2-year-old girl and 5-year-old boy found wandering across a battlefield in Gettysburg, Pa., with blood dripping off their hands all most certainly traveled to 1992 through a time warp that snatched them out of the year 1863 — at the height of the Civil War!

Psychiatrists who examined John and Mary Carnes after the FBI took them into custody say there is little doubt that the children "were born in and belong to the 19th century, 130 years in the past."

The experts went on to say that the brother and sister are terribly frightened and disoriented. But they are convinced that they are young and healthy enough to adjust to the 20th century and lead normal lives when their psychological break from the past is complete.

"I never thought I would hear myself talk like this but these children do not belong to the present, they belong to the past, and a time warp is the only way to explain how they got here," FBI psychiatrist Robert Canton said in a report that was leaked to newsmen in Washington, where the children have been taken for observation.

"I used to think I knew what space and time were all about," he added. "All I know now is that I don't know anything. This is the damndest thing I've ever seen."

According to the FBI report, the mind-boggling drama allegedly unfolded when an off-duty policeman spotted the children — who were dressed in Civil War-era clothing — walking across the historic battlefield at Gettysburg on October 2. The officer assumed that they were the victims of abandonment or abuse and delivered them to juvenile authorities to be interviewed and evaluated.

Three days later the authorities asked the FBI for assistance. And in a report that has left the psychiatric community reeling, Dr. Canton concluded that the brother and sister are suffering "severe psychological trauma consistent with a sudden or violent displacement in setting.

"And the setting in question," he added, "is our own past."

"These children may be disturbed but they are sane and I am convinced that they have told us nothing but the truth during our evaluations," said the expert.

"The little girl has a limited vocabulary because of her tender age, of course, but the boy speaks clearly and intelligently and has been especially helpful.

"He identifies his mother and father as Emily and Jason Carnes and says they were hurt when Union and Confederate soldiers engaged in battle on his family's farm."

"He believes the year to be 1863, when the Battle of Gettysburg took place, and though he is unsure of the date, he thinks the month is July."

"Oddly enough, there is a Jason Carnes listed in 19th century historical records. According to those records, he married Emily Baker in 1857, had a son named John in 1858, and a daughter named Mary in 1861.

FBI AGENTS took these photos of Mary Carnes, 2, above and her brother John, 5, right, who were found wandering on an old battlefield.

"The record also shows that Carnes owned a farm near Gettysburg and that he and Emily Carnes were caught in a crossfire and perished during the battle that was fought there in 1863.

"The couple's children were also reported killed but their bodies were never found.

That's where this notion of a time warp comes in. Their bodies may not have been found because somehow, some way, the children wound up here with the blood of their parents dripping off their hands."

Dr. Canton didn't say what will become of the children but acknowledged that months of therapy lie ahead of them. The FBI declined to comment.

FED-UP GALS FORCE DRUNKS TO BEAT DONKEYS — NAKED!

By JOE BERGER / Staff writer

Booze-happy bachelor Tishar Suri was skunk-drunk and having a ball till a gang of liquor-hating ladies beat him up, put him on a donkey — and made him ride naked through the city till he swore off the bottle forever!

And tipsy Tishar is just one of dozens of guys who've been forced to ride in the raw in recent months as the grumpy gals of Imphal, India, try to humiliate their menfolk into sobering up.

"I never dreamed a bunch of women could ever get me on a donkey naked, but those ladies were extremely strong and mad as hell," said the red-faced repairman.

"They just grabbed me off the street and started hitting me and knocking me around until I couldn't resist anymore. Then they took off all my clothes and put me on that animal's back and made me ride all over town while everybody laughed and ridiculed me.

"It was very degrading, but I knew it had to happen someday because they've done the same thing to almost every man I know."

The fire-breathing femmes are members of a two-tisted temperance group called the Women's War Association, dedicated to wiping out whiskey guzzling throughout Manipur state in northeast India.

Day after day, the hard-boiled belles patrol the streets, looking for any luckless schmuck to come along with a stagger in his step or booze on his breath.

"The minute one of them spots a drunk, she starts whisting and dozens of reinforcements come running in, bringing their donkey with them," said tickled Police Detective Dilip Tindy.

"They grab the guy, rough him up a little, strip off his clothes and lead him through town on the donkey, hooting and hollering to make sure everybody comes out to look. They keep the poor man on the ass' back for hours until he swears he'll never take another drink."

"So far, they've put more than a hundred guys through their 'donkey trial,' and I'd guess a lot of them really have given up on liquor forever."

"So the police aren't about to stick their noses into it — because we've got a lot fewer drunks to clean off the streets these days."

Troubled Tishar, 34, says all his plastered pals are so terrified of the vigilante ladies they've either sworn off the sauce altogether or taken to tiptoeing along in the privacy of their rooms.

"I couldn't find anybody to drink with, even if I wanted to 'cause every man in town is running scared," said the rattled roofer.

"Once you've had to ride naked through town on the back of a donkey, you don't ever want to have to do it again."

UFOs made headlines in 1884 — 19 years before Wright brothers' first flight!

By MICHAEL TODD
Special correspondent

UFOs were widely reported in U.S. newspapers even in the two decades before the Wright brothers flew, two leading experts reveal.

"That historic flight took place in 1903 — yet there are several well-documented UFO cases from the 1880s and '90s," said UFO society official Lorita Green.

"Since airplanes were not flying before the Wright brothers, these sightings could not possibly have been of Earth aircraft."

"The conclusion is inescapable — space aliens have been exploring the Earth since before the turn of the century."

Here are some examples of the pre-airplane UFOs, collected by Green and Hayden Hewes, director of the international UFO bureau:

June 6, 1884: Nebraska rancher John Ellis and three ranch hands saw a blazing, metallic cigar-shaped UFO slam into the ground. Racing to the site, they found an array of metal fragments resembling machinery.

A heavy rainstorm forced the men to leave the scene. When they returned after the storm, the UFO debris was gone.

The men estimated the craft to be 50 to 60 feet long and 10 to 12 feet in diameter. Details of the crash were reported in the Nebraska Daily State Journal after it happened.

March-April 1897: The New York Sun and Herald reported bright UFOs were spotted over Chicago, Omaha, Denver and Kansas City, Mo. Stopping occasionally, the cigar-shaped aircraft scanned the ground with searchlights, as if exploring our planet's surface.

Incredibly at 6 a.m. on April 17, a UFO crashed into a windmill tower in Aurora, Texas, and was demolished. The Dallas Morning News reported that the mutilated body of an alien pilot was recovered and buried in an unmarked grave.

March 1899: G.O. Scott of Tonto Basin, Ariz., reported sighting a luminous object in the sky flying across the disk of the moon.

"These could not have been aircraft mistaken for UFOs — because the airplane had not yet been invented," says Hewes.

Woman dies in plunge from bridge where she was raped in 1973!

Nineteen years after two thugs raped Rebecca Brown and threw her off a bridge the pretty Wyoming woman died in a tragic plunge off the same bridge!

Tormented by memories of her horrifying experience, Rebecca tried for almost two decades to pick up the pieces and go on.

But after all that time her strength failed her.

The 37-year-old woman rented the movie Ode to Billy Joe — the story of a youth who threw himself off a bridge after being molested by an older man — and watched it over and over.

Days later, she returned for the first time since the crime to the bridge where she'd been attacked and fell to her death in what authorities believe was a suicide.

They say she had never recovered from the emotional wounds that resulted from her horrifying experience.

The Casper woman and her 11-year-old sister Amy were abducted from outside a convenience store in September 1973 by a pair of hoodlums.

Rebecca, then 18, was brutally raped and both girls were hurled from a 112-foot-high bridge into a narrow wilderness gorge.

Amy died, but Rebecca survived and her attackers eventually were brought to justice.

But although she married, started a family and worked at a satisfying job, the shadow of past horrors darkened her life.

"She always thought that she should have died and not her sister," recalled her former husband, Ray Brown. "I just think she reached the point where she just gave up. The reason she went back to the bridge was because of her sister — to be with Amy."

By JULIA McKNIGHT
Special correspondent

HAUNTED Rebecca Brown watched Ode to Billy Joe over and over before her death.

Authorities say the fact that Rebecca survived the attack at all is a tribute to her courage and strength. Her fall was broken when she slammed into a ledge before hitting the water. She swam with a shattered pelvis to the edge of the water and hid herself from her attackers until the two men left.

Then for 10 agonizing hours she inched her way up a steep, gravel-covered rock slide to the road above, where a passing motorist eventually rescued her.

Rebecca's two attackers, Ronald Kennedy and Jerry

Ronald Kennedy

Jerry Jenkins

Jenkins, were arrested and convicted of first-degree murder, rape and assault. They were given life sentences, but Rebecca was terrified that they would one day be paroled or escape. These fears — along with her lasting grief over losing Amy — tormented Rebecca in the weeks before her death. And many believe they led her to suicide. "She had nightmares every day that they would get out, nightmares about her sister," said Rebecca's mother, Toni Case.

"Part of her died when her sister died."

Top secret experiment used sperm cloned from dead President's corpse

I HAD ABIE LINCOLN'S BABY!

The long months of wonder and waiting are over for Ella Landry, a Baltimore secretary who last year was impregnated with Abraham Lincoln's sperm, when she gave birth to the dead President's daughter!

It was only last December that Weekly World News revealed to its readers that 27-year-old unmarried Ella had been impregnated with manufactured sperm created from genetic material taken from the dead President's remains.

On January 8, the courageous blonde delivered a healthy 8-pound, 7-ounce girl. The astonishing birth was kept hush-hush while extensive genetic tests were carried out to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that Ella's baby was sired by a man who has been dead for more than a century.

"The long months of wondering are over. There never was any doubt that I was pregnant or that the fetus was normal.

"The big question was whether the baby could be genetically proven to be Abraham Lincoln's daughter.

"All the tests — and there were dozens of them — prove that the baby I had by natural delivery in January was in fact fathered by Abraham Lincoln."

The heroic mom became involved in the super-secret experiment after answering a newspaper ad for "adventurous volunteers."

"They wanted single women between 21 and 28, and at least two dozen showed up for the initial interview," Ella told The NEWS when she revealed her history-making pregnancy.

they finished, they chose me. They said I have an IQ of 168. That was a bit of a surprise."

But Ella's real shock came when she learned what the renowned researchers had in store for her.

"When they told me they wanted me to have Abraham Lincoln's baby, I just about flipped," she said.

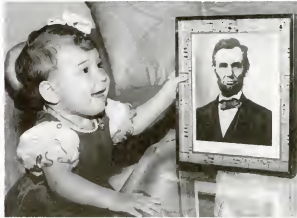

"But when they explained what it could mean to mankind, I told them I'd be honored to get pregnant in the name of science."

Ella still refuses to identify the scientists who carried out the incredible laboratory conception. Nor will she name the research clinic where she and her amazing baby have been living.

"The doctors say they are preparing a paper that will tell all in one of the medical journals," she explained.

"I don't think I should say anything more at this time than I already have."

LITTLE Abby takes over her dad, says her jubilant mom. An extensive series of medical tests proves conclusively that the 10-month-old miracle girl is Abraham Lincoln's daughter.

America's top sniffer pooch calls it quits

U.S. customs dog Bill the Beagle is retiring from active duty — after six years as top dog working for the government, sniffing out illegal fruits, meats and vegetables.

The 6-year-old pooch has racked up records for nosing out foods smuggled into the country through Miami International Airport.

Wearing the uniform of a U.S. Department of Agriculture dog, Bill sniffs baggage and scents a banana here, an apple there, a smuggled sausage in a carry-on bag.

Authorities praise his work, which helps prevent the importation of foreign pests that could harm the U.S. agriculture industry.

Among food-sniffing dogs, Bill is the best, holding a record for the most sniff-outs in a month, the most meat in a single seizure (400 pounds of sausage), the most seizures in a year and the most in a day. But all that law enforcement has tucked the little tail-wagger out.

"He just doesn't enjoy what he's doing anymore," says handler Gary Lair. "When you quit enjoying what you're doing, there's no sense in forcing it."

'Richard Gere is NOT gay,' says Cindy Crawford

Mole-faced model fed-up with rumors about hubby!

Talk about waking nightmares of the rich and famous...

Cindy Crawford was harassed as a kid because of the mole under her nose. Now the top model is harassed by rumors that her hubby, heartthrob Richard Gere, is gay!

"I was very self-conscious growing up," recalls Cindy. "Kids would make hurtful remarks like 'You've got a horrible blob of chocolate on your face.' I wondered why God had given me something like that and I wanted to get rid of it so badly."

Cindy kept the mole and turned it into a trademark. But another blot hit her life recently — the vicious gossip accusing her hunk hubby of being gay. "I've heard all those rumors and they are just ridiculous rubbish. They're just nasty lies," says Cindy, her brown eyes ablaze. "I ignore them, but the trouble is even though they are untrue people still spread them because they remember the bad stuff about somebody rather than the good stuff." Can you imagine having to defend your husband's sexuality every time a microphone is stuck in your face? What other celeb has to take such malicious guff? "I have a wonderful marriage to Richard. We have fun just doing simple things," says Cindy gamely.

Live sex on compact disc? That's exactly what Guns N' Roses did — the heavy metal madmen had group sex with, who else? a groupie — in the middle of a recording session!

"We taped the song while we f----- this girl in the studio," says lead singer Axl Rose. "You can hear her moaning on the record. She started dancing around and we did it because it felt right."

Sounds like the feverish fan was an American — she band hates English girls because they're not bald enough.

"They don't try hard enough," says lead guitarist Slash.

"In Los Angeles they just come up to you and grab you."

ANIMAL RIGHTS CRUSADER: Brigitte Bardot snipped a donkey's privates.

Brigitte Bardot's donkey-shines!

Brigitte Bardot, the ex-sex kitten and current animal rights freak, did the right thing when she had her neighbor's hyper donkey castrated three years ago, a French court has ruled. The trouble started when B.B. took in a randy young donkey named Charly to share grazing privileges with her own donkey, Mimosa, and an aging mare, Duchesse.

"Charly began to show male instincts towards the old mare," says Bardot's lawyer, Gilles Dreyfus.

Horsefathers, says Charly's owner, Jean-Pierre Ma-nivet, "Charly was a normal donkey. And, like a normal donkey, he was interested in the young female donkey, not an old mare at the end of her rope," says Manivet.

Brigitte ordered her vet to snip Charly between the hind legs, ending his romancing forever.

A Saint-Tropez judge threw out Manivet's claims for material damages and moral prejudice.
"Brigitte did what any animal lover ought to have done," says her lawyer. Brigitte may have another reason — bardot in French means mule — the offspring of a donkey and a horse!

Shattered Pennsylvania couple sues agency for $5 million

ADOPTION NIGHTMARE!

By JULIA MCKNIGHT

Special correspondent

Loving parents Keith and Sharon Kramer were thrilled when they adopted 3-year-old Paul — but nine months later their dream was shattered when they realized they were living with the Kid from Hell.

"He lied. He stole. He even tried to strangle the neighbor's child," said soft-spoken mom Sharon, who with her husband now lives in Colmar, Pa. They have taken legal action against the California adoption agency who they believe knew Paul's past was a formula for disaster.

Today, Paul is 16 and has a long history of abrupt mood swings and bizarre, violent activity. "He set fires, hurt animals, tried to commit suicide in the third grade," his mom explained. "By the time he was in the sixth grade, life was a 24-hour roller coaster."

"Once Paul claimed blackouts from hitting his head in a public pool. Strangers called an ambulance, just as they did a few months later, when he pretended to be blind on a public street."

Years of psychiatric sessions, medications and stays in institutions have exhausted the fecked parents' medical insurance benefits for Paul. The treatment center charges a staggering $12,500 a month.

"We believe we have no choice but to proceed with a lawsuit" seeking $5 million to pay for Paul's treatment plus an unspecified amount in damages, explained his frustrated mom.

"After 13 years, we are exhausted from bureaucrats slamming doors in our faces."

Officials of the San Diego County Social Services Department will not talk about Paul's case because of confidentiality laws.

But the Kramers maintain the agency was aware of Paul's background at the time of adoption.

"We told the agency we would not be able to care for a child with emotional problems," Sharon maintains, but the eager parents-to-be soon fell in love with Paul, presented as a charming, cherubic child.

'We ended up with the Kid from Hell'

In actuality, Paul was the offspring of a 14-year-old mother who, the Kramers now maintain, was known as an emotionally disturbed alcoholic who abused her son. This information, provided by county officials to Paul's psychiatrists early this year led the doctors to diagnose him as suffering from fetal alcohol syndrome.

"We tried for years to learn more about our son's early life," lamented the sad mom.

"We desperately needed to understand why Paul was Paul. Maybe, had we known earlier, something could have been

Tourists find town of Condom, France, a swell place to visit

True or false: The condom was conceived in Condom, France? Answer: False!

In fact the town, located northwest of Toulouse, was named after one of its earliest residents, Monsieur Condom, who had nothing to do with the prophylactic device. So where are people getting this idea?

"It's the tourists — mostly Scandinavian and northern Europeans — who come to take their pictures next to the sign leading to the city," said Mayor Jacques Moizan.

"If that's the reason they want to come to Condom, it doesn't bother me."

"For the past three years 15 percent of the tourists who visit Condom come simply because of its name," he said.

RUDE AWAKENING

Stunned store owner Michael Foster knew it wasn't his night when cops woke him up to tell him a burglar alarm was ringing at his ice cream shop — then busted him for drunk driving when he showed up to turn it off!

"They called me on the phone and said to get over to the store fast because the alarm was sounding," miffed Michael told reporters in Perth, Australia. "I'm a good citizen, so I hopped in the car and rushed right over, even though I'd been drinking before I went to bed."

"Well, when I got there, they ordered me to turn off the alarm, then slapped the cuffs on me. Somehow it just doesn't seem fair."

The rattled merchant will have a chance to tell it to the judge early next month.

TODAY'S SCHOOLS ARE TURNING KIDS INTO A BUNCH OF IDIOTS!

I'm madder than Albert Einstein with a busted calculator over the way our public schools are graduating idiots as fast as they can turn 'em out!

No wonder this great country is going to hell in a hand-basket!

The latest Atex-Carnegie Poll shows that seven out of ten American fourth-graders can't tie their shoes. Now that's frightening, folks.

But what's really scary is that the same poll, which had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent, found that 63 percent of high school seniors visibly move their lips when they read.

Talk about morons. The only person I know who flaps their lips when they read is my old buddy and saloon proprietor Michael Garvin. But he's got an excuse, being from Ireland where everybody does it.

Whatever happened to those late, great schoolrooms of yesteryear, when hardtail teachers would slap the fire out of a kid just for the hell of it?

I remember when I was a boy growing up in South Dakota and times were tough.

I had to walk 14 miles each way to a one-room schoolhouse — after I had milked the cows, strung a mile of barbed wire and plowed two acres behind the family mule.

Miss McCarthy was our teacher and she didn't take any crap from anybody.

I once saw her rip off Danny Roper's right ear, she yanked it so hard.

And that was just for picking his teeth with a piece of straw, by gum. And I still walk with a slight limp from when she broke my left ankle with a fireplace poker because I told her I hadn't finished my homework.

Today's kids could use a little dose of that kind of medicine, folks. Miss McCarthy would have already poisoned or shot half of the little vermin who infest America's public school system in 1992!

And another thing. In my 1937 school photo — the kid with the circle around his head is me — there are seven future doctors, two Nobel Prize winners, three preachers, two generals and one of the first female jet pilots.

Not one criminal, lawyer or savings and loan president in the bunch. In other words, not one rotten apple in the barrel. And we were the slow class! Nowadays I guess we call 'em "learning disabilities" or some such crap.

So why can't eight out of ten American high school grads make change for a dollar? Be-

Hot flash! Your normal body temperature should be 99.9 degrees

You've been told all your life that your normal body temperature should be 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit — but the true figure should be 99.9!

That's the startling discovery made by Dr. Philip Mackowiak of the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Baltimore, Md., who did a study based on 700 oral temperature readings from 148 men and women at different times of the day. "We believe that 98.6 should be abandoned as a concept having any particular significance," Dr. Mackowiak said.

He says the error of 98.6 was made in 1868 by a German scientist who conducted his research using a large, inaccurate thermometer which poorly recorded the subject's temperature from under the armpit.

'Now they know I'm not just a dumb bimbo!'

Hooker whips 20 college whiz kids in IQ contest...

BRAINY Lynette Carter shows off her talents in math after winning IQ contest.

and then goes back to work!

A sexy, blue-eyed hooker took on 20 super-smart college grads in a high-IQ contest to prove she was more than just a blonde bimbo — and beat their brains out with a whopping IQ of 196!

"Now they know I'm not just a dumb bimbo who can't make it in the world unless I'm on my back," said curvaceous cutie Lynette Carter, who won $10,000 in the day-long battle of wits.

Lynette, 20, took the Stanford-Binet intelligence test along with 11 men and nine other women and whipped them all with an amazing score of 196.

None of those who took the test scored lower than 170, but no one came close to Lynette's breathtaking performance.

"She was terrific — just shy of the world's record of 228," a contest official said.

Lynette became a high-priced hooker within a year after moving from Milwaukee, Wis., to New York City in 1990.

"I worked as a waitress and tried modeling, but people wouldn't accept me for what I am," she said.

"To them I was a pretty blonde bimbo who didn't have enough sense to come in out of the rain. So I decided to cash in on that and become a call girl," said the beautiful blonde, who has only a high school education.

"The money I've made with my body has bought me expensive clothes, a nice car and exotic trips.

"But that bimbo image has always bugged me," said the curvaceous cutie.

When Lynette read about the intelligence contest, she decided to give it a shot. "I read everything I can get my hands on and watch Jeopardy! on TV when I'm not working," she said. "Besides, I had nothing to lose and a lot to prove to myself."

To the amazement of everyone, including Lynette, she defeated graduates of such prestigious colleges as Harvard, Yale, MIT, Stanford and Michigan.

And what does Lynette plan to do with the $10,000 prize?

"I'm thinking of going to college and perhaps study law. I have proven to some of the best minds around that I'm not just a pretty blonde bimbo," she said.

How to stop junk phone calls

It's easy to get rid of salesmen who phone you during dinner or a good TV show if you get the jump on them with the right response.

You can stop a sales spiel in mid-sentence with one of these handy responses:

- "Oh, I thought you were the funeral home calling back for my husband's obituary."
- "I'm so glad you called. The dog just died and I need someone to talk to."
- "Can you call back later in the week when my wife gets back from Reno? This place will be all hers then."

• "You called at the right time. I'll order whatever you have just to restore my credit rating. Those bankers went nuts over a couple of bounced checks."

If these don't work, you can always tell him you have to take a cake out of the oven — put the phone down and leave him hanging. Or better still, just hang up.

ON THE JOB, Lynette talks with a potential customer.

MICHAEL JACKSON'S

exclusive

SHOCKING FAMILY TREE!

Michael Jackson's roots in America stretch back more than 150 years — to a Choctaw Indian who fathered a child by a black slave girl.

The exciting saga of the singing sensation's family includes:

- A rebellious slave who was tortured for running away from his master — but later used his knowledge of native medicine and his skill at casting spells to become a well-to-do landowner.

- Michael's great-great-grandmother who was the daughter of a black plantation servant and the crippled white daughter of the plantation's owner.

- A schoolteacher who married one of his 16-year-old pupils when he got her pregnant — and feared a Ku Klux Klan reprisal.

Those are just some fascinating facts uncovered about the king of pop's family:

MATTIE DANIEL (1864-1937) The owner of a Mississippi plantation was outraged when a young black servant got his crippled white daughter pregnant — and she gave birth to a child, Mattie. The young mother's family put little Mattie outside to die — figuring starvation and the elements would kill the baby.

But a very short time later the family had second thoughts — fearing they might be charged with murder since Mattie was half white. So Mattie was taken back inside and cared for, then was later given to a black family to raise. She grew up picking cotton for pennies a day. She married twice and had a total of 17 children.

JULY GALE (Early 1800s): A Choctaw Indian.

July was once an Army scout. He met a young slave girl named Gina and began visiting her regularly. Soon they produced a son Nero.

Although July was a free man, his half-breed son was born into slavery because his black mother was a slave. The white people

His ancestors include:

- A Choctaw Indian!
- A child genius!

had nicknamed July "Jack" so Nero was known as "Nero Jack's son" — which evolved into "Nero Jackson."

NERO JACKSON (1838-1934): Nero hated being a slave. He told his descendants that his white master would put the slaves' food into a low trough and Nero and the other slaves had to get on their knees to eat it.

Once Nero was almost beaten to death for running away. Another time his cruel master pressed a pair of red hot tongs to his nose for trying to flee — and he bore the burn scars the rest of his life.

SAMUEL J. JACKSON

(born 1903): Samuel was so brilliant that he entered Alcorn College in Mississippi when he was just 15 years old.

And after graduation, Sam took a job as a teacher in Ashley, Ark. He had walked 200 miles to apply for the job.

But on that very first job he fell in love with a 16-year-old student in his class named Chrystalee King.

"She was the prettiest black girl in the country," Samuel said. "She got pregnant."

Samuel married the girl and seven months after the wedding, Chrystalee gave birth to a son, Joe — who became Michael Jackson's father.

Gunman hits 32,860 straight shots!

Surc-shot gunman Tom Frye set an amazing world record when he shot down 32,860 consecutive 2½-inch wood-cubes out of midair — without a miss! The eagle-eyed Frye used two .22-caliber guns during his incredible feat.

PROUD GRANDPA: Sam Jackson was an Arkansas teacher when he married a student and fathered Michael Jackson's dad, Joe.

The man of my dreams walked out in my sleep!

Confidential

Dear Humiliated in Bisbee: That's what you get for going to the family reunion with a hanana in your pocket!

Dear Nausedate in Martell: You should have thought about that before you ordered "Cat Head" soup in a Korean restaurant!

Dear Crestfallen in San Pablo: You sound like an intelligent person — but you aren't!

Dear Horrified Teen in Roxbury: There's not a 14-year-old boy on the planet who hasn't had the same "explosive" dream. Ask your dad for details.

Dear Ecstasie Gal in Denton: With a fencing sword? Ouch!

Dear Sad in Mud Lake: If I lived in Mud Lake, I'd be depressed, too!

Dear Innocent in Random: The way I see it you can do one of two things: Take the hozo's crap for life — or shut him up with a lead pipe!

Dear Dotti: I recently met a guy in a bar and after a few dates, I was convinced that I had found the man of my dreams. He asked me to marry him and even though we hadn't known each other all that long, I accepted.

I also agreed to go to bed with him — which turned out to be the biggest mistake I ever made. After I went to sleep that night he sneaked out of bed, left my apartment and vanished from my life. I feel cheap. What should I do? — Fooled in L.A.

Dear Fooled: You should have realized that the bum was up to no good when he asked you to marry him after a few dates. You didn't, and as far as I'm concerned, you ARE cheap!

I'm doing hard time for protecting my home!

Dear Dotti: Last year I caught someone in my apartment and beat him up for his. But instead of staggering away to lick his wounds, he crawled into my front yard and died. Now I'm doing hard time for manslaughter. How do you feel about my situation? — Con in Tucson

Dear Con: I think you got exactly what you deserved. After all, if you're going to kill a burglar you can't let him amble out of your house and die in your yard.

You've got to keep the body in your house and put a loaded gun in his hand to "justify" what you've done!

Mom thinks I'm crazy but I think I'm in control!

Dear Dotti: My mother says I'm living in the fast lane because I drink, smoke and have sex at the age of 13. I also have a lengthy police record dating back to my tenth birthday, but I happen to think that I'm in control of my situation. My mother and I both like your advice. What do you think? — Speedy in Devil's Lake

Dear Speedy: You're not living in the fast lane, you're DYING in the fast lane. Clean up your act, kiddo — before it's too late!

With all your loot, could you give me a loan?

Dear Dotti: On several occasions in the past you've made it a point to tell people how wealthy you are. So will you loan me $10,000 to make a down payment on a house? Nobody else will give me the cash. Please help. — Desperate in Lumberton

I'm as fat as a pig and proud of every pound!

Dear Dotti: Why do you make so much fun of fat people? I weigh 350 pounds and I'm damn proud of it. Wise up — and leave us fat folks alone! — Fatty in Fremont

Dear Fatty: Some of my best friends are big fat pigs and contrary to what you might think, the only jelly bellies I make fun of are those who whine and cry about their appearance and have no self-respect. Proud wide bodies like you are tops in my book — and don't you EVER forget it!

Why did space aliens kidnap my baby?

Dear Serena: Two weeks ago I was driving down a highway with my baby when a disk-shaped UFO appeared on the road in front of me, forcing me to swerve into a ditch.

I seem to remember two tall, skinny creatures with high heads snatching my baby out of her car seat and then flying away in their spaceship. Why did these evil things take my baby, Serena? Will I ever get her back? — Heartbroken in Alhucquerque

Dear Heartbroken: The space aliens who kidnapped your baby will deliver her safe and sound to your doorstep early next week. My crystal ball tells me that these creatures conducted a number of harmless medical tests. On a high note, they are quite friendly — and used their special healing powers to repair your little one's defective heart!

I LOVE THE MAN WHO

Suzie Watkins' 14-year-old son was gunned down and decapitated, but the bighearted nurse says she loves the guy accused of doing it — and wants to take him into her home when he gets out of prison!

"I love Martin — I care about him," says Suzie, who lives with her six surviving kids in Gibsons, Fla. "He's always looked for someone to care about him and that's me. I will always be there for him."

"All religions say you should turn the other cheek and forgive. It's not my place to judge him. I'd offer him a home — I couldn't allow him to stay in prison."

Suzie's son Jared was a runaway who was befriended by his accused killer, Martin Welch, 25, a few months before his death. The boy was at Martin's house on June 24, police say, when he was shot in the head while wrestling with Martin over a .22 rifle.

According to police, Welch and a companion panicked and decided to hide the corpse. They cut the dead boy's head off and buried the body in a vacant lot near Martin's home.

Then the men carried the head to a different spot, burned it along with Jared's clothes and buried it.

Cops say Martin and his friend talked to others about what they'd done and before long Suzie got a phone call from a neighbor reporting rumors that her son was dead. Su-

BEER-LY DEPARTED

Friends of dearly departed Johanna Connors were "pretty well gone" themselves after they honored her last wish — and spent 12 hours touring her favorite English pubs.

Johanna, 70, would have been proud of the way her pals handled themselves during the wake.

"There was no rowdiness or singing," said Herbie John, owner of a bar in Haverfordwest. "After all, it was a solemn occasion."

Here's good news for fatties

Fat people are much less likely to suffer violent deaths than thin people, a new study reveals.

"I find the results startling!" says Dr. Kenneth Warner, a medical examiner. He said that because 26 percent of the population is overweight, he expected that one out of four violent death victims would be fat.

However, he found that only 10 percent of those who died violently were overweight!

Dr. Warner's study also revealed:

- Vehicle accidents were the most common violent deaths for porkers, killing 46, while other accidents accounted for nine deaths.

- Suicide took the lives of 22 fat folks, compared to 189 skinny people.

- Murder only claimed 12 overweight people, while 109 thin people became murder victims.

Warner said he doesn't know the reasons behind the different violent death rates for fat and thin people but he speculates that variations in lifestyles play a key role. For example, overweight people could be at less risk because they aren't as likely as thin people to engage in dangerous sports such as skydiving or hot-air ballooning — and young people are less likely to be overweight than older people.

It's also possible that overweight people have different social habits. Explains Warner: "Maybe they don't go to bars as much and therefore are less likely to be shot in bars."

The study covered 726 violent death victims.

zie called police and later that day Martin was arrested, confessed to the crime and led authorities to the body, police say. But the victim's mother says she has no hard feelings about her son's death.

"Martin did not shoot Jared intentionally," insists Suzie, 36. "My son was trying to take that gun — he was suicidal. And what happened afterward was panic. Martin can't deal very well with making decisions."

"But Martin is not violent and he's not cruel. He's the kind of person that took in stray dogs and even stray people."

"So when Martin's mother said she couldn't take him home if he got out on bail, I offered to take him in. I talked with my kids and they wanted him to come to us. I have no fear of him."

In fact, Suzie feels sorry for Martin and is spreading the word that Jared's death was not his fault.

"If it hadn't been Martin, it would have been someone else," she says. "Jared had a lot of problems."

Phony virgin causes volcano to erupt during sacrifice!

PHONY virgin girl Daisy Talsya was rejected by a volcano in one huge fiery burst!

SACRIFICE squad of the Dirabistu tribe was wiped out during the surprise eruption.

Tribe sues her parents after blast fries 5 savages!

By JOE BERGER

Staff writer

Slaphappy savages climbed to the rim of a rumbling volcano and threw a kicking, screaming virgin into the fiery crater as a sacrifice to quiet the angry gods.

But moments later, as the nitwit natives peered into the inferno admiring their handiwork, the mountain blew sky-high — burying the bozos under tons of red-hot lava!

Now, relatives of the five guys fried alive by the blast are suing the parents of the hapless gal they heaved into the volcano — claiming she wasn't a virgin after all.

"She told everyone she was a virgin, but she was not — because if she was a virgin, the gods would not have made the mountain explode," said ticked-off Terena Morea, mother of two brothers who bit the dust when Mt. Emeru erupted last month in New Guinea.

"Obviously, she was impure and no longer suitable for sacrifice — and her lies cost my boys their lives. Now her mother and father must pay for what she did to us."

But the parents of ill-fated Daisy Talsya, 18, have vowed to fight her killers' money-grubbing kin tooth and nail.

"Those heathens came into the city of Koropo and kidnapped our daughter and threw her into that blast furnace to please their pagan gods — and they expect us to pay them?" fumed disgusted dad Francis Talsya.

"They're jungle savages and wouldn't know what a court of law was if some sleazy lawyer wasn't leading them around by the nose. The whole thing is ridiculous."

The hail-raising tale began four weeks ago when members of the dingbat Dirabistu tribe left their home in New Guinea's Owen Stanley Mountains in search of a virgin to appease the gods growing restless inside Mt. Emeru.

"These people believe the gods of fire and rain live in the volcano, and when the mountain began to rumble and shake, to them it was a sign the gods were angry," said Koropo Police Chief Lee Keesha. "They knew the mountain was about to blow, but they felt they could stop it by sacrificing a virgin to the gods inside."

But rather than offer up one of their own, the knuckleheaded natives traveled 50 miles downriver to Koropo — a town of 12,000 — in search of an unblemished belle.

"They apparently asked an acquaintance in Koropo to point out a 'town virgin' and then abducted Miss Talsya, took her to the mountain and threw her in," Chief Keesha told reporters.

"Unfortunately for them, the volcano erupted at that very moment and they met the same ghastly fate as poor Daisy. So now they say it's Daisy's fault — and that's insane."

"But maybe this will be a lesson to those savages. Next time, maybe they'll use one of their own damn virgins."

SUPERGIRL

Gutsy 12-yr.-old lifts 400-pound trailer to rescue trapped sister!

By TONY CASSIDY
Special to The NEWS

Supergirl Mandy Scott saved her 8-year-old sister Marcie from being crushed to death — by lifting a 400-pound trailer and pulling her free!

The gutsy youngster called on a store of strength and determination she didn't know she had in lifting the four-wheel trailer with nothing more than her two hands. Then, seeing that her little sister had turned blue, Mandy ran into the house crying, "Mommy! Mommy! Come quick! Marcie's dead! She's dead!"

When the mom reached her motionless daughter, she quickly administered CPR and managed to get the youngster breathing on her own again. Then she huddled Marcie into the car and rushed her to a hospital only three miles from her home in Seattle, Wash., where doctors were able to stabilize her condition.

"I don't know how she did it, but Mandy saved her sister's life when she lifted that trailer," the amazed mother declared. "One axle was pinning Marcie's chest and neck and was preventing her from breathing. Another few minutes — and it would have been too late to help her." Although all her friends are hailing the 5-foot-3, 150-pound powerhouse as a heroine, 12-year-old Mandy seems unimpressed with her incredible feat.

"We were both out in the yard when I heard Marcie scream," Mandy explained.

"She had crawled under a trailer my daddy was working on and it fell on her. I didn't even think about how heavy it was. I just grabbed the back end and lifted it up. Then I moved it so I could get Marcie. All I thought about was that my sister was dead. I'm glad she's not."

Mandy's 40-year-old mechanic dad had removed the trailer's rear wheels and used concrete blocks as jacks.

He had gone to a parts store for wheel bearings only minutes before the blocks collapsed. "I always knew Mandy was strong . . . even for a boy her age," the father said. "But I didn't know she was THAT strong. She's something real special. I'm pleased as punch."

But modest Mandy says she couldn't have done it alone.

"Seeing Marcie being hurt gave me a lot of strength," she explained.

"But I know God helped. He deserves some credit too."

HEROINE Mandy Scott gets a grateful hug from little sister Marcie.

Odd facts about U.S. Presidents!

By JOHN ANDERSON

Correspondent

James Monroe was a college dropout. Dwight D. Eisenhower was the first President to appear on national TV. And Andrew Johnson was an illiterate until his wife taught him how to read at the age of 18!

Here are more fascinating tidbits about America's Presidents.

● Grover Cleveland underwent a secret cancer operation in 1893 and had part of his upper jaw removed and a hard rubber plate inserted in its place — a fact that wasn't revealed until 24 years later.

● James Knox Polk actually banned drinking in the presidential mansion.

● James Madison was the only Commander in Chief to command troops in battle while holding office during the War of 1812 when British forces marched on Washington, D.C.

● Abraham Lincoln was the first American leader to advocate the vote for women. And he did it in 1832 — 88 years before it became a reality.

● William Howard Taft was not only the heaviest President (a whopping 325 pounds at his inauguration), but also the first to play golf and the first to toss out a ball to open the baseball season.

● John Adams and John Quincy Adams are the only father and son to serve as Presidents.

● William Henry Harrison never made a single significant decision while he was Chief Executive — he died from pneumonia just 31 days after

GERALD FORD:
Once worked as a fashion model.

DWIGHT D.
EISENHOWER:

national TV.

he took office. However, his grandson, Benjamin Harrison, also became president.

● Gerald Ford is the only President who was also a photographer's model. As a college student in 1940 he donned ski clothes and posed for a series of photographs in Look magazine.

Those fascinating facts are from Dennis Sanders, author of The First of Everything.

Robber chops clerk's head off on camera!

A concealed camera captured drifter Samuel Ivey holding up a service station store — and chopping the clerk's head off.

Police in Mobile, Ala., arrested Ivey, 35, of Loma Linda, Calif., just one block from the station where the headless body of Debra Lewis, 27, was found.

"I don't know where he got his heart from, but it sure didn't come from God," said Kenneth Lewis, the victim's brother.

If convicted of murder, Ivey could be sentenced to death or life in prison, according to police spokesman Tom Jennings. He is being held without bond.

Your favorite season tells you your true personality!

By COLLEEN O'MEARA
Correspondent

Your favorite season reveals a lot about your personality, two psychologists say. Here's what you're like, according to the season you prefer most:

SPRING: If you like the spring, you're a real romantic who loves being in love. "You are flirtatious, lighthearted and charming. You feel youthful and enjoy the new life all around you, whether it's a newborn infant or newly sprouted bud," said Dr. Elaine Kahn, co-author of 1,001 Ways You Reveal Your Personality.

You're also an eternal optimist, love bright colors and enjoy playing or listening to music.

SUMMER: If summer is your favorite season, you're carefree and open. "You enjoy being comfortable and really appreciate freedom. Your easy-to-get-along-with personality is in tune with summer's warm days and balmy evenings," said Dr. Kahn. You're also self-motivated and enjoy the better things of life. Summer people are very body-conscious and concerned about their appearance. They also like practical jokes and have a great sense of humor.

FALL: People who like fall are family-oriented and home-loving, as well as warm and passionate. If you like fall, you're also orderly, organized and good at making plans.

You're highly adaptable and "able to juggle priorities successfully," said Dr. Linda Russek, a research psychologist. "You're also introspective, thoughtful and even dreamy. You like time to yourself to sit and enjoy life."

WINTER: Winter lovers are courageous, energetic people who like the outdoors and love a challenge. "If winter is your favorite season, you're a take-chance person who feels best when you're overcoming hardship and adversity," said Dr. Russek.

You're a risk-taker with real leadership qualities who likes to "champion the rights of those who can't speak well for themselves," said Dr. Kahn. You stick to opinions that matter to you and refuse to give in when you know you're right.

Although you may like more than one season, Dr. Kahn said, the one you love best reveals the most about you.

Stupid thief shoplifts two left shoes!

ACTUALLY... I HAVE TWO RIGHT FEET!

Slaphappy Heinrich Lutzje got home and found the pair of shoes he'd shoplifted would fit only if he had two left feet. So he tried to exchange one — and landed in the slammer!

The clutzy crook went back to the store in Hamburg, Germany, and snatched a matching right shoe. But clerks saw him make the switch and called the cops.

Hapless Heinie pleaded guilty to theft. A judge fined him $83 and told him to hotfoot it home.

HAVE SEX FOUR TIMES A DAY — AND LIVE TO BE 100!

Sex makes you live longer!
That's the startling new conclusion of a team of top Russian doctors after conducting research involving thousands of elderly people.

"We have determined that regular sexual activity is essential to good health and long life," said Dr. Seymon Dalakashvili.

"Having sex four times a day can definitely increase your life span to at least 100 years."

In two extensive studies, Dalakashvili and other Russian researchers discovered:

● Although hormone levels and sexual desire gradually decline between the ages of 60 and 80, they rise dramatically after 80 — and by the time men and women are 90, they have the same hormone levels and sexual urges as people in their early 60s.

● Remaining sexually active past age 60 can add eight to 10 years to your life.

● The majority of people in the survey over 100 had sex an average of four times a day during their lives.

● Sexual abstinence for more than a month causes the body to break down — and serious health problems can result.

The commission conducted one study of centenarians — people 100 years of age or over — in the mountainous region of Russia which boasts the world's heaviest concentration of people over 100.

"We examined hundreds of possible factors such as smoking, drinking and heredity," said Dr. Dalakashvili.

"And we think we finally found it — sex! We were astonished to find that the sexual hormone levels of most of these 100-year-olds were actually as high as those of people in their 60s!"

"We found a definite correlation between sexual activity and health," Dr. Dalakashvili said.

Woman who gave us the Valentine died an old maid!

ESTHER HOWLAND
was a real romantic — but she died a spinster.

By SUSAN WRIGHT
Correspondent

The woman who introduced the Valentine's Day card to America helped bring romance to millions — but she died a lonely spinster.

She was Esther Howland, the first person to mass-produce Valentine's cards in the U.S. — and one of the country's first career women.

Esther was recently graduated from Mount Holyoke College when, in 1848, she received a lovely Valentine greeting from England. It was sent by a business associate of her father, a stationer and book-seller in Worcester, Mass.

Inspired by the delicate beauty of the card, Esther decided to make her own Valentine greetings. She convinced her father to order laces, colored paper and other supplies from England, and used them to craft a dozen elegant cards.

Esther's brother Allen carried these samples on a horse-and-buggy sales trip through New England.

Because of the painstaking care involved in making the cards, they were priced between $5 and $10. So Esther expected her brother to return with orders for no more than $200 worth of Valentines — and was astounded when he came back with orders for $5,000 worth.

Esther then hired some of her friends to assist her, and set up one of America's early assembly lines in a room of her parents' home. She designed the cards, while her assistants assembled them.

Eventually Esther's business expanded across the nation, and racked up annual sales over $100,000.

But Esther retired from her business in 1881 to look after her ailing father. And in 1904, the mother of the American Valentine died at age 78 — and she was still unmarried.

Happy hogs make better bacon!

Happy hogs make better eating. That's the conclusion of pig pros, who advise farmers to shower their oinkers with affection — so they don't suffer a stress attack.

When porkers get tense, they secrete a chemical that turns their flesh pale and soft — and makes them taste crummy.

To keep your pigs in top heaven, make sure they have plenty of toys to play with. Balls or old phone books will do just fine, the experts say.

It's good,

Look no, no teeth! Little Michael Fortyn, 6, wasn't about to let a couple of missing choppers keep him from enjoying this king-size ear of corn grown on his parents' farm in Fairfield Center, Moine. It was a hit-and-miss proposition, but in the end, the big, juicy kernels proved no match for the determined kid.

Backyard mechanic's spark plug 'stew' blows sky high!

By BILL ALLEN

Correspondent

Weekend mechanic Carl Fleury has learned a frightening lesson about fixing his car. Never, ever cook spark plug stew — because it explodes.

Fleury placed six plugs in some oil in a pot on his kitchen stove to cook off the carbon and left his Lake Worth, Fla., home for a few minutes to get some lunch.

Neighbor Lois Shepard had just returned home from work about 15 minutes later when she heard an explosion and saw a flash of fire in Fleury's kitchen.

She rushed over and took Fleury's three children outside while another neighbor called the fire department.

"There was minor damage to the kitchen but fortunately the children weren't injured," said a cop who was at the scene. "The combination of the plugs, oil and heat was explosive."

Boiling spark plugs in oil is not a good idea, according to mechanic Frank Sarantidis.

"I've fried french fries and chicken, but not spark plugs, not in oil. You don't cook them," he said.

Nightmare comes true!

David Swankie woke up in a cold sweat after he dreamed he was killed in a car wreck.

Several hours later he was dead — killed when his van collided with a pickup truck in a blinding rainstorm.

The 36-year-old Birmingham, England, man was so shaken by his nightmare that he asked a friend to drive his van. The friend, Chris Wood, escaped with minor injuries.

Where you eat reveals what your family is really like!

By JOHN HILLARD

Correspondent

Where you, your spouse and children eat most of your meals together reveals the kind of family you have, experts say.

Here are some common places families eat, and what they mean, according to psychiatrist Jack Leedy and psychologist Fredrick Koenig.

Dining room — Families that have most meals in the dining room are very traditional. Members are close and comfortable with each other's company, yet the family is still somewhat formal. Members enjoy sharing their undertakings and projects in a quiet atmosphere.

Kitchen — Such families are exceptionally close, informal and very democratic. Members often get up and serve themselves instead of waiting to be served. They also like to share responsibilities, such as pitching in and helping to clean up.

In front of the TV on trays — These families are casual and relaxed. They are concerned about events of the day — and what they can do to make things better. They enjoy sharing experiences, and regard eating their evening meal sitting in front of the TV as a family get-together.

Two or three special restaurants — Family members like routine, familiar things, such as dining out where they are known and liked. They don't mind spending their money on things they value, such as good food served in pleasant surroundings.

A variety of restaurants — Such families thrive on excitement and adventure. They have great curiosity about the world, like learning about new things, and enjoy a wide variety of family fun activities. During dinner members often will try exotic dishes they've never eaten before.

Fast-food restaurants — Busy, active families grab meals at such places as McDonald's and Burger King. They eat because they need the nourishment. Such families really like to enjoy life.

"Eating habits can be a strong reflection of a family's personality," said Koenig.

"Some of the most meaningful times are during the family meal."

Added Leedy, "No matter where they eat, eating together is a sign of a strong and healthy relationship between members of the family."

Wife finds silence isn't golden!

Unhappy hubby Ernst Hort was a man of few words — about three a day, his wife told the judge.

Susanne Hort, 32, took note of everything he said to her for two months, but she didn't wear her hand out writing down the words, she told a judge in a divorce court in Bielefeld, Germany. Two of her 35-year-old husband's longer speeches were, "This coffee tastes like washing-up water" and "Scratch my back, I itch."

Tight-lipped Ernst didn't waste words when Susanne told him their five-year marriage was over. He wrote to her lawyer, "I agree."

Super snoop wiretapped 42 neighbors

... say detectives!

By DICK DONOVAN

Staff writer

Cops say troubled Lawrence Baxter was sure his neighbors were out to get him. So he carried out a diabolical scheme to find out what they were up to — he tapped their phones and tape-recorded their private conversations!

The 42-year-old St. Petersburg, Fla., machinist had used over-the-counter equipment to tap into a telephone junction box that handled connections to 42 of the homes in the neighborhood.

"As near as we can tell at this time, he had been tapping the telephone phones since the middle of 1991," said Police Detective Randy Bricker. "We don't know what he intended to do with the tape recordings he made. Maybe he just wanted to intimidate his neighbors."

"He's very angry at the whole neighborhood. He thinks that everyone dislikes him and are trying to get him. The wiretapping may have been his way of protecting himself."

Bricker said neighbors called police after hearing their own tape-recorded voices coming from Baxter's garage.

Armed with a search warrant, investigators went to the garage and found telephone wiretapping devices, amplifying and recording equipment, illegal guns, blank birth certificates and other forms of identification.

Baxter is being held in the Pinellas County Jail on $55,000 bond. He is charged with possession of a sawed-off rifle, marijuana, cocaine and unlawful possession of wiretapping equipment.

WIRETAPPER:
Lawrence Baxter

Bricker said that Baxter has been married for about five years and has lived in the neighborhood for about the same length of time. He is a former notary public who kept his seal after allowing his commission to expire.

"What's really scary about this guy is that we don't know who he is," Bricker declared.

"We can't find a birthplace for him. We know he used the names Lawrence Daniel Baxter, Donald A. Phillips and Baxter D. Johnson. He is known to his neighbors as Daniel Rain-bow."

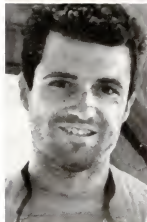

His fingerprints have been sent to the FBI, but it'll take several weeks before we get their report."

DYING FOR A SMOKE!

TRAGIC Hobie Eason knew smoking was bad for him and had tried like crazy to quit.

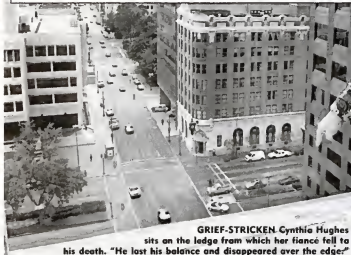

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Nicotine fiend Hobie Eason was itching for a cigarette, but his finicky fiancée wouldn't let him light up in her apartment. So hapless Hobie stepped onto a window ledge for a smoke — and plunged 16 stories to his death!

"I was talking to him, begging him to put that damn cigarette out and come back inside so he wouldn't fall and kill himself," recalled grief-stricken girlfriend Cynthia Hughes, 25.

"But he told me not to worry, he'd be fine — then he just lost his balance and disappeared over the edge."

Heartick Cynthia said she'd been hugging her beau to stop smoking since shortly after she met him 11 months ago.

"Hobie knew it was bad for him and he knew how much I hated the smell, so he tried like crazy to quit," the blonde bookstore boss told reporters in Brisbane, Australia.

"But he was so hooked he kept quitting and starting all over again.

"I didn't yell at him too much because I knew it was really hard for him."

But when excited Cynthia moved into a new high-rise apartment, the determined lady laid down the law.

"The first time he came over, I told him I absolutely didn't want him smoking in my new apartment and stinking everything up," she recalled.

"And I told him I didn't want him smoking in the hallway and setting off the smoke alarms, either. He said he could wait, but a few minutes later I came out of the bathroom and there he was, standing on this little narrow ledge outside my window, puffing away. I begged him to come inside before he broke his neck, but he said to hold my horses, he'd be down in a minute."

Then hard-luck Hobie, 31, took one misstep and toppled 16 stories to the sidewalk below. Investigators said he died instantly. "Those cigarettes are going to kill you one way or another," said medical examiner Dr. Daniel Westhope.

IT PAY$ TO BE A GOOD LISTENER

It really pays to be a good listener — because people who listen well get more promotions and raises at work, experts say.

"All kinds of research backs up the idea that better listeners do better at work," says communications professor Dr. Andrew Wolvin.

"They have higher productivity, and they get more promotions and raises."

Education professor Dr. Sara W. Lundsteen agreed: "Good listeners simply have access to more information on which to base a decision. They make better decisions and perform better on the job. And because they become standouts at work, good listeners benefit from increased promotions and raises."

Here are the experts' tips on how to become a better listener:

1. In addition to giving your full attention to the person who's speaking, indicate you're interested in what's being said. Lean toward the speaker, nod your head, or encourage him simply by saying "yes," "uh-huh" or "I see" in a quiet way.

2. Don't jump in with your own comments when the speaker pauses. This shows you haven't been listening, since you obviously were trying to think of something to say.

"People have a habit of waiting for a speaker to take a breath so they can leap right into the conversation with a statement like: 'Oh yes, that reminds me...' Rather than listening to the other person's message, we want to talk about our own story," Wolvin said.

3. If the subject you're listening to is boring, make a game of finding ways to use it. For example, you can tell yourself: "The next word this person says could be the most important thing I'll hear in my life. How can this information be helpful to me?"

Lundsteen said: "You will be surprised how interesting a talk can become when you listen with this attitude."

STARSHIP STUNNER!

Germans find spaceship repair manual — and are building a UFO!

By LAYTON POST

Special correspondent

German scientists claim to have found a UFO repair manual that will help them build a flying saucer and master intergalactic flight by 1995!

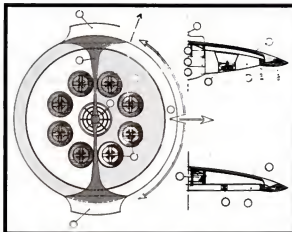

"Everything we need to build a starship is right here at our fingertips," astrophysicist Peter Kramer told reporters at a news conference in Frankfurt.

"This manual contains all the blueprints and technical information we need to build and equip an extremely advanced starship of our own."

"The technology far surpasses anything ever before seen on Earth. But there isn't a doubt in my mind that we can duplicate it. We're already conducting tests and building components. 'I don't think I'm being overly ambitious to predict that we'll have a flying prototype no later than 1995.'"

Kramer refused to say where the UFO manual was found and actually cut the news conference short when reporters pressed for copies. But a colleague, Dr. Hermann Kamper, grudgingly confirmed that it was recovered from the wreckage of a starship that crashed in the Austrian Alps earlier this year.

The 850-page manual is intact, he added, and written in a mathematical language that just about any scientist can understand.

A single page of the manual that was obtained from an unidentified source clearly shows the starship's advanced design.

In spite of that, American space authorities remain sharply divided in their opinions of what the Germans might be able to do with the manual.

While some say that it would be virtually impossible to build a starship with materials and technologies currently available to the Germans, others are convinced that it can be done.

In fact, one senior NASA official warned that the Germans might use a UFO as a military weapon in a bid to take over the world.

"I'm not saying that I distrust the Germans, but if they pull this thing off and actually build a starship, God help us all," he said.

"These people have a long history of military aggression and when you consider that our most sophisticated weapons would be powerless against a starship, you have to believe that they would take advantage."

"A single starship would give them undeniable military supremacy," he added. "They could easily vanquish and enslave all mankind with an alien tool."

America's hottest new pets: ELECTRIC EELS!

GLOW-IN-THE-DARK PETS: Electric eels are in great demand all across America.

By TANYA BRÖDER
Correspondent

Americans are going wild over the newest fad in pets — electric eels!

That's right. Folks are snapping up the high-voltage creatures as fast as breeders make them available, vowing their friends with the eerie light they shed by hooking up to electric lights in the family fish tank.

"They're beautiful — and they make great night-lights, too," says Abbie Foster, 32, a convenience store clerk who keeps three electric eels in her Austin, Texas, home. "All you have to do is train them to turn on their electricity on command and they swim up to the tank bulbs and zap them. I love to sit in the dark and watch the tank glow. "They're expensive, but worth the price. All my friends want them. They're so popular now that there's a three-month waiting list."

Pet experts say that several varieties of electric eel make good pets, but the most spectacular type — a South American freshwater fish called Electrophorus electricus — is most in demand. A relative of the carp, the fish can produce from 450 to 600 volts of electricity — more than enough to light a neon bulb.

They make great night-lights!

The eel, which generates electricity from special organs in its muscle tissue, uses its electric power to paralyze or kill prey and to aid in navigation. But eel owners say the creatures are so loving that they never zap their owners.

"They really are affectionate little things," Abbie says. "They'll swim right up to the side of the tank when they see you coming, wiggling their little tails."

"They're very intelligent."

I've even trained mine to run a little electric fountain, play electric chimes and even make simple calculations on an electric adding machine.

"They really have a lot of personality. They play with one another, they cuddle up together — it's great fun to watch them."

The eels are so difficult to get right now that they sell for $249.99 each — if you're lucky enough to get one of them. But the good news is that the suppliers say the prices are sure to come down as breeders increase the number of available pets.

"My pet shop owner says he's expecting a shipment of 75 eels around Christmas time and about twice that number by February," says Abbie.

"A bunch of my friends are putting in orders for the ones that are left so most of them are sold already."

DON'T LET YOUR JOB DRIVE YOU CRAZY!

You can deal with problems on the job by following some expert advice from two psychologists.

Here are several common job-related problems — and the experts' tips on how to overcome them:

● Getting a raise: Make a mental note of what you've accomplished since your last raise. Be sure to include anything that's made money for the company. Then ask your boss for a brief private meeting.

Explain why you deserve a raise and point out what you've accomplished. Look your boss straight in the eye and be confident. Chances are he'll agree with you — and you'll get your raise.

● Getting a promotion: Always do more than is expected of you — and make sure your boss and his superiors know about it. If you're having coffee or lunch with your boss, casually mention projects you're working on. Try to get your projects written up in company newsletters. That way, your supervisors will have your name in mind when promotions are considered.

● Mean-minded supervisor: Try to open up a dialogue with your boss. Remember, timing is the key. Learn to anticipate bad moods and work around them. Take advantage of less stressful days to short circuit potential problems.

Your supervisor will have fewer reasons for cruelty if things are going well.

● Lazy co-worker: Talk to him and tell him that you're not going to carry his workload. If that doesn't help, speak to your supervisor. Explain what's happening. The problem will be out of your hands — and your supervisor will have to solve it.

● Office romances: Work and romance do not mix. If you are attracted to someone at work, turn your feelings off in the office and pursue the relationship away from your professional environment.

● Jealous co-worker: Sit down with the person privately and tell him, "I sense some tension between us." Never accuse him of being jealous — that will only put him on the defensive.

Listen to what he says. If he attacks you verbally, stay calm.

Once your co-worker realizes that you're sincerely interested in trying to clear the air, his jealousy will fade.

Charlie Brown meets the Red Baron!

WW2 pilot's new pal is the German ace — who wouldn't shoot him down!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

It took two miracles for World War II B-17 pilot Charlie Brown and Luftwaffe fighter pilot L. Franz Stigler to meet and become close friends!

The first miracle was when the German air ace could have blown Brown's crippled bomber into oblivion in 1943 — and didn't!

The second miracle was that both had survived the war and met 46 years later — on friendlier terms!

Since that meeting in 1989, the one-time mortal enemies have welded a strong friendship. Now older and mellowed by the passing of time, their deadly deeds in the skies over worn-torn Europe are gone, but not forgotten.

It was Dec. 20, 1943, when Lt. Charles Brown guided his B-17 Ye Olde Pub toward the target, a German aircraft factory in Bremen.

Brown, 69, originally from Weston, W. Va., and now living in Miami, Fla., gave this account of his miraculous escape from death:

"Suddenly, the nose of the B-17 was mangled by flak. Then two of our four engines

Nazi flier swooped in for the kill but he decided to spare the crippled B-17 were destroyed. I quickly pulled out of formation so we wouldn't damage our other planes if we exploded.

"It didn't take long for the Germans to pounce on us," Brown went on.

"Eight fighters came at us from the front and seven more from the rear. And we were in no condition to fight them off.

"I headed straight at one of them. I had given up. I really didn't think we would get through this one.

"I had the plane in a tightening circle when I blacked out. Our oxygen system had been shot up."

Brown has no recollection of the plane's plunge from 25,000 feet. When he regained consciousness the crippled B-17 was 50 feet above the ground. Incredibly, Ye Olde Pub was flying straight and level — but smack over a German airfield!

And that's when Oberleutnant L. Franz Stigler — on the ground reloading his guns — spotted Brown's mortally wounded plane. He leaped into his Messerschmidt ME-109 and took off in pursuit.

STIGLER

Eager to score the kill, Stigler closed in from the rear. This is how he described the encounter:

"The B-17 was like a sieve. There was blood everywhere. I could see the crew trying to help their wounded. The tail gunner was slumped over his gun, his blood streaming down its barrel.

"Through a gaping hole in the fuselage, I could see crewmen working frantically to save a comrade whose leg was blown off. I thought to myself, 'How can I shoot something like that? It would be like shooting a parachute.'

"When I was flying in North Africa, my commander said, 'You are fighter pilots. If I ever hear of you shooting someone in a parachute, I'll shoot you myself!'"

Stigler then flew wingtip to wingtip with the crippled bomber, close enough for the two enemies to see each other clearly.

The German ace escorted the struggling B-17 to the North Sea.

Then, to Brown's amazement, he saluted, put his plane into a crisp roll and flew away, allowing Brown to make it back to a British airfield.

Stigler, who was shot down 17 times, is one of only 1,200 of Germany's 30,000 fighter pilots to survive the war.

Originally from Ragnsburg, Bavaria, he is 77 and now lives in Canada.

The two old warriors recently had a chance to rehearse that wartime memory when they attended a ball in Miami, Fla., celebrating the 45th anniversary of the U.S. Air Force as a separate branch of the armed forces.

Woman soaks herself in gasoline to cure VD — and bursts into flames!

By JACK ALEXANDER / Staff writer

In a really bizarre accident, a woman burst into flames and died when she got too close to a fire after washing her body with gasoline — to cure venereal disease.

"She had sponged herself down with the gasoline in some sort of ritual cleansing because she thought she had VD," Police Capt. John Sturner said. "As it turned out, she didn't have the disease."

The weird accident occurred in the modest home of La Yang, 52, in St. Paul, Minn.

"She was suffering from some minor infection and believed the only way to get rid of it was to soak her body with gasoline," Sturner said. "She was about to rinse off the gasoline with warm water when she got too close to the flame on a gas hot water heater."

Curing VD with gasoline is an old Chinese folk remedy. A relative helped beat out the flames that had enveloped the woman's body.

She suffered burns over most of her body and died several hours later in the hospital.

"She was able to tell paramedics what happened before she lapsed into unconsciousness," Sturner said.

"Her death appears to be accidental."

6 SUREFIRE STEPS FOR STAYING SLIM ALL WINTER!

Cold, dark weather actually makes you want to eat more — but you can avoid putting on unwanted pounds during the winter months by following these simple tips, says European expert Claude Dupre.

● Keep active: And if the weather is bad, exercise indoors. Ride an exercise bike if you have one. Walk around the house or just turn on some music and dance. If your health allows it, bundle up and take a good brisk walk outside.

● Avoid the hot food trap. In cold weather, you naturally want to eat hot food to warm up.

Have hot meals, but make sure your portions are adequate and not too large. Also, avoid using butter and high-calorie gravies and sauces.

● Always eat small meals. This helps to spread your calorie intake evenly over the whole day and help your body burn calories more effectively. You can, for example, have a small breakfast, lunch, an afternoon snack, dinner, then have a small evening snack.

● Outsmart psychological hunger pangs. Avoid lingering around the dinner table and heaping your plate with second helpings. Be sure to have a salad with the meal, plus a low-calorie dessert.

● Bake goodies for others, but not for your-

She looked sexy in her white gown!

A proud dad took one look at his beautiful daughter in her bridal gown shortly before the wedding ceremony — and sexually assaulted her.

Sicko dad rapes the bride

... on her wedding day!

The terrified bride-to-be, who is now 33, said the brutal assault occurred 14 years ago in the living room of the family home a few minutes before her weirdo father was to give her away at the wedding.

A jury in Maesteg, England, heard testimony that the father — a strict disciplinarian who beat his children with a stick — had been assaulting the young bride since she was a schoolgirl.

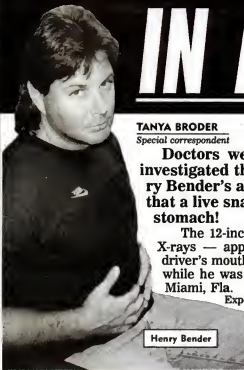

She said it was one of a string of sex attacks — including rape — against her and her sister. Crown prosecutor Roger Thomas said the dad would wait for her to come home from school, then undress her and rape her.

It was likely the girl's mother knew, but "was too scared to speak out," he said. The sexual attacks continued right up to her wedding day, the woman testified. "I was too frightened to tell anyone at the time because my dad told me it would mean the end of the marriage and that my room would be taken away from us," she said.

Her father, now 60, has admitted one charge of incest but denies four other charges of incest, four of rape, five of indecent assault and three other sexual offenses involving his two daughters.

His trial continues.

X-RAY SHOWS IN MAN'S

TANYA BRODER
Special correspondent

Doctors were astonished when they investigated the weird fluttering in Henry Bender's abdomen — and discovered that a live snake is trapped in the man's stomach!

The 12-inch reptile — which shows up on X-rays — apparently crawled into the truck driver's mouth and down his throat weeks ago while he was passed out on a park bench in Miami, Fla.

Experts cannot explain how it continues to live inside the man's body, but because 32-year-old Bender refuses to undergo surgery, they must wait until the animal dies before it can be removed.

"It's the most amazing thing I've ever seen — there's no case like it in the annals of medicine," said a physician who has cared for Bender during his two-week hospitalization. "The snake is getting weaker, but it still has a lot of life left. As far as we can tell, it's not poisonous and has done no real damage to the patient's stomach."

"Mr. Bender complains of occasional cramping and does not sleep well because of the movement in his stomach. But he won't have an operation. He says his religion forbids him to go under the surgeon's knife."

According to his physicians, Bender reported to a clinic in north Miami complaining of strange sensations in his abdomen. The man told doctors he had driven from Ohio to Florida with hurricane relief supplies, had too much to drink the previous night and passed out on a park bench. When he woke up he felt a "twisting, squirming" feeling in his belly.

Pal shot for giving chef tips on how to barbecue chicken!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A quiet backyard cookout turned deadly when a couple of pals fussed over how to grill chicken.

Tequesta Cannon was shot in the shoulder and head with a by the grill fussing over how to cook the chicken," said Acting Police Chief Dennis Davis. "When Cannon kicked over the grill, Rawlings went into his house and grabbed a gun."

Rawlings first shot Cannon in the shoulder and then fired a second bullet that struck him in the head, Davis said. Cannon was dead on arrival at a hospital in Wrightsville, Ga.

"It was one of those senseless shootings about nothing, really. Everybody was sitting around having a few drinks and waiting for the chicken to get done," Davis said.

"Then Cannon drove up and commenced to arguing with Rawlings. Rawlings told Cannon, 'I don't need you, of all people, to tell me how to barbecue chicken.'"

Rawlings, 39, has been jailed without bond on a murder charge.

Would YOU quit watching TV for $1,000,000?

Fifty percent of all Americans watch so much TV that they wouldn't give it up — even for a million bucks!

That's according to a recent survey by TV Guide which also found that 36 percent of us leave the boob tube on even if we're not watching it.

The survey also revealed that most Americans will turn on a TV if it's off when they walk into the room.

LIVE SNAKE TRAPPED STOMACH

Bender begged doctors to calm his queasy innards. But when X-rays revealed that there was a foot-long snake in his stomach, he panicked.

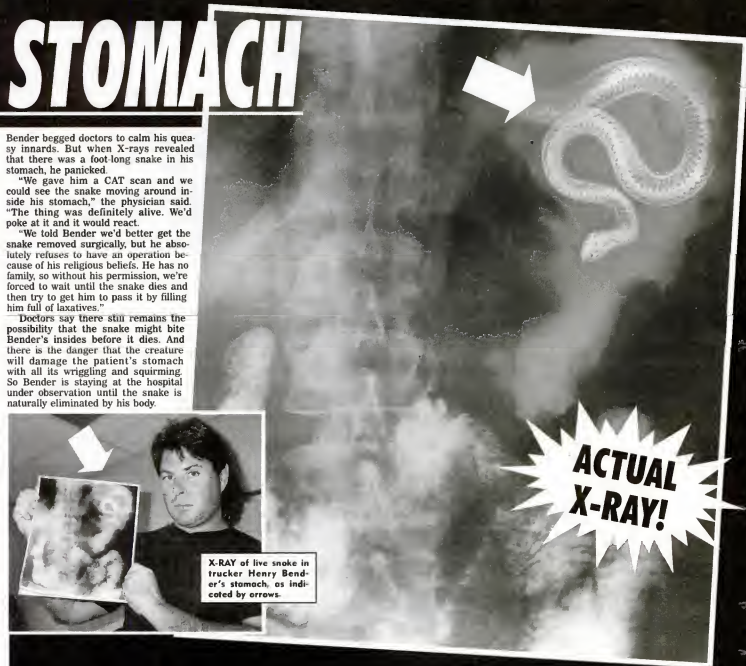

"We gave him a CAT scan and we could see the snake moving around inside his stomach," the physician said. "The thing was definitely alive. We'd poke at it and it would react."

"We told Bender we'd better get the snake removed surgically, but he absolutely refuses to have an operation because of his religious beliefs. He has no family, so without his permission, we're forced to wait until the snake dies and then try to get him to pass it by filling him full of laxatives."

Doctors say there still remains the possibility that the snake might bite Bender's insides before it dies. And there is the danger that the creature will damage the patient's stomach with all its wriggling and squirming. So Bender is staying at the hospital under observation until the snake is naturally eliminated by his body.
